'Captain Underpants'

George and Harold are making trouble again, but this time it's on the big screen. The children's comic book series "Captain Underpants" is coming to theaters June 2. Kevin Hart and Thomas Middleditch play George Beard and Harold Hutchins, two fourth graders. The duo accidentally turn their principal into a superhero named Captain Underpants. Now it's up to the boys to keep Captain Underpants out of trouble. •

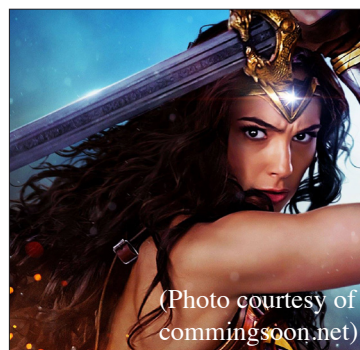

'My Cousin Rachel'

This romantic drama, which debuts July 14, details the relationship between two cousins, Phillip, played by Sam Claflin, and Rachel Ashley, played by Rachel Weisz. Phillip suspects Rachel of murdering his godfather, but things quickly become complicated as Phillip begins to fall for Rachel. This adaptation includes actor Iain Glen from "Game of Thrones" and a cover of Chris Isaak's "Wicked Game." •

'Pirates of the Caribbean: Dead Men Tell No Tales'

Captain Jack Sparrow sails into theaters May 26 with Johnny Depp returning to play Sparrow. The fifth movie in this fantasy franchise features a new set of pirates fighting against an old foe, Captain Salazar, played by Javier Bardem. The pirates will need to acquire the mysterious Trident of Poseidon in order to defeat Salazar and his ghostly crew. •

'Wonder Woman'

An addition to the DC Universe, "Wonder Woman" premieres in theaters June 2. The story follows Diana, princess of the Amazon tribe of female warriors. She leaves her home to stop the carnage of World War I. Gal Gadot stars as the iconic superhero. She first appeared in "Batman v. Superman: Dawn of Justice." With actors like Chris Pine and Robin Wright also starring, the movie is sure to break the box office. •

Wasabi Sushi Bar

★★★★★

The first stop on my sushi adventure was Wasabi Sushi Bar located on Manchester Road. As I walked into the restaurant, I was impressed by the charming ambience; I immediately noticed the wooden floors and darkly painted walls with matching chairs. As I opened the extensive menu, I decided to order the caterpillar roll filled with unagi, shrimp, cucumber and avocado for $11. I also tried the Clayton roll and an avocado roll. The service was fast, and the waiters were nice. When the food arrived, I was excited to dig into my first roll. Wasabi's caterpillar roll did not let me down. The perfect combination of eel and shrimp was balanced out by the cucumber and avocado, and I immediately scarfed down all eight pieces. The eel and shrimp were cooked to perfection, which is a difficult task to achieve. Not only was the roll delicious to eat, but it was also plated with expertise. Thin slices of avocado were placed on top of the rice to add a unique texture to the roll. I give Wasabi Sushi Bar five stars. •

I Love Mr. Sushi

★★★

After going to Wasabi, I went to I Love Mr. Sushi on Olive Boulevard. Upon entering, I was definitely less impressed than I was when I walked into Wasabi. From a visual aspect, the restaurant is much less appealing, and it seemed as though it had not been updated in decades. However, the menu is much bigger and has a wide variety of options; there is something for every type of sushi fanatic. Feeling bolder than I had the night before, I decided on a pizza roll. The pizza roll includes crab meat, cream cheese, cucumber and avocado, and it is topped with salmon, spicy mayonnaise and eel sauce. The whole roll is baked on tin foil and can be ordered for $12.95. As I ate the pizza roll, I was overwhelmed by the level of spiciness in the mayonnaise. It became difficult for me to finish the roll because of how spicy it was, so I ended up removing the salmon and mayo from the top. I was much more satisfied with the taste after doing this, and I enjoyed my last few pieces of sushi. I give I Love Mr. Sushi three stars. •

Drunken Fish

★★★★

For the last stop on my sushi journey, I went downtown to Drunken Fish, located in Ballpark Village by Busch Stadium. Drunken Fish was definitely the biggest restaurant I went to, and the design was very welcoming and modern. On the menu, I noticed that there were many dishes aside from sushi, such as stir fries and steak dishes. I ordered a specialty starburst roll. The starburst roll contains crab, shrimp tempura, avocado, tamago, a type of Japanese omelette, and masago, or fish eggs. It was wrapped in pink soy paper and topped with honey-wasabi mayonnaise and sriracha sauce and could be ordered for $14.50. The starburst roll was the prettiest of the rolls that I tried, thanks to the pink soy paper. Although the presentation was admirable, the taste of the starburst roll was, in my opinion, not quite up to par. The soy paper was crumbly, and the wasabi mayo was a bit too spicy. However, the crab, shrimp tempura and avocado blended together perfectly and were quite satisfying. Overall, I give Drunken Fish four stars. •
